Centre for Neuro Skills Secures Three New Major Contracts

Bakersfield, CA (Monday, June 3, 2013) - New partnerships with two major insurance carriers - Anthem Blue Cross and Aetna – and with the largest Third Party Administrator in the U.S., Sedgwick Claims Management Services - will allow Centre for Neuro Skills (CNS) to serve a broader base of patients in need of traumatic brain injury care at its clinical facilities, it was announced today.

Contracts with each carrier enable greater access to the world-class programs and services for which CNS is known. The Sedgwick contract now identifies CNS' Dallas clinic as a member of its Southwest Medical Provider Network. Sedgwick represents thousands of injured workers and is the largest workers' compensation Third Party Administrator (TPA) in the country. The company specializes in workers' compensation cases, and serves many Fortune 500 companies in Texas.

CNS' San Francisco facility has also been successfully credentialed into the Anthem Blue Cross network as a Participating Provider. Anthem members in the nine county Bay Area region will have improved access to CNS' renowned medical treatment, disease management, and rehabilitation. This expands the original contract with Anthem, signed in December 2010, which includes the CNS Bakersfield and Los Angeles locations.

And Aetna, one of the nation's leaders in health care and disability insurance, will make CNS programs available to the diverse array of patients it serves in California. Aetna has more than one million referring health care professionals in its networks, including 5,400 hospitals.

"These contracts improve access to treatment for thousands of people in need of postacute care," said Dr. Mark J. Ashley, founder and CEO of CNS. "It empowers both the carriers and CNS to promote health and enhance the quality of life for those who've suffered a catastrophic brain injury."
